The Importance of Patient-Provider Communication: Centering Disabled Bodyminds in Medical Care

In this talk between Sav Schlauderaff (they/them) and Naty Rico (she/her), they will discuss the multiple barriers that disabled people face when seeking and accessing medical care such as medical ableism, ableist stereotypes, and attitudinal, structural, physical, financial, and time barriers. Additionally, they will discuss misconceptions around patient-provider communication especially as it relates to disabled people, and what changes can be made to improve relationships between medical providers and disabled people.
